

No Title Provided

Author: Unknown

Python classes are like blueprints for creating objects let's say we want to create some characters in a video game with attributes like Health damage and speed.

Here I have two different characters being created a warrior and a ninja.

When you first create a class object in Python it will always run this Dunder init method first..